

International Association of Drilling Contractors

IADC ART BOP Controls Subcommittee
10.00 Tuesday, 24 April 2018
IADC
10370 Richmond Ave. Suite 760
Houston, TX 77042

Minutes

- Introductions and safety briefing
- How should we handle differences in testing subsea vs. topside/onshore valves?
 - Earlier thoughts
 - Base set of requirements for topside/onshore
 - Addendum for subsea
 - Today's thoughts
 - Defer hyperbaric testing at least until Roy is back
- Long discussion about venting cycle count – annular circuits require higher venting cycle counts, but we don't want to lock ourselves into language using annular circuits
 - Maybe we need to put verbiage in that requires cycle counts for venting?
 - For now, "realistic to application" should suffice
- 1000 cycles could be too high or too low depending on where it will be used
- As was the case for shuttle valves and SPM valves, we do not want to define the circuit used for testing, we want to require valve manufacturers to report the correct information to use it for system sizing
 - Still disclose test conditions
